

Early Train

Martin Robertson

These fields and trees would, if grey clouds were even on the sky or if the sun were bold and high, an ordinary landscape seem;
where now an otherworld of art or dream (the spirit's two alembics) lies built out of frost and mist and level light before our ordinary eyes.