Martin Robertson

Shadow and Substance

The lamp in the translucent pane reflected overlays the moon. Sometimes when the self grows thin I am my father or my son.

A mechanist philosophy conspires with science to deny the existence of a me.
Yet I believe it constantly.

 $This poem is reprinted from Now and Then, the website devoted to the poetry of Martin Robertson, at {\tt http://rtnl.org.uk/now\_and\_then/linearity}. The poem is reprinted from Now and Then, the website devoted to the poetry of Martin Robertson, at {\tt http://rtnl.org.uk/now\_and\_then/linearity}. The poem is reprinted from Now and Then, the website devoted to the poetry of Martin Robertson, at {\tt http://rtnl.org.uk/now\_and\_then/linearity}. The {\tt http://rtnl.org.u$