

Martin Robertson

Upward Turn

Spring, cold and wet, moves into summer with no change. Yet the brave blossom is white, and this first day of June warm air,
soft sun
take over. And I come suddenly on a briar
its early bloom
offering cups of light.

—

Despair
is judged by some the lowest sin. And they are right.